Debate Team Will Travel

The CBC Debate Club will be sending three teams to a debate tourney at College of Puget Sound over the weekend of February 14.

The debate teams have been out of practice for some time, but members feel they are in top shape for the tourney, according to Roger Brown one of the debate members.

There will be schools from the Pacific Northwest in this tournament, so CBC will have to be at its best. Debaters will leave on Wednesday and arrive in Tacoma in time to start debating on Thursday.

The tourney will consist of many types of speech contests. There will be the Oxford Type Debate in which three teams will enter from CBC. The individual events will consist of: Extemporaneous Speaking, Impromptu Speaking, After Dinner Speaking, Oratory, Discussion, Interpretive Reading.

ASB President, Lynette Johnson Recently Wed

ASB President Sully Bayless was married on December 27, 1958, to a former CBC student. The wedding of Miss Lynette Johnson and Mr. Bayless took place in Renton, Washington. Approximately 200 guests were at the wedding.

A reception was held and immediately following there was a gasbord dinner and a dance.

After the dance the couple left for Texas. They flew to the region around Fort Worth.

While in Texas, they went to Gateway Singers . . .

Famous Quartet To Sing At Dance

Want to hear some of the old songs that are brought up-to-date with a jazz beat, but haven't lost the intensity and feeling with which they were originally sung?

If you do, make it a point to see The Gateway Singers, Saturday, February 7, 1959, in the Student Lounge at 9 p.m. They will supply the intermission the Cotton Bowl. They also fished on the gulf and looked at the various universities which Sully may attend this fall.

Bayless is now back attending CBC and is active again as ASB president.

program at the dance sponsored by the A.S.B. The dancing music will be by Joe Banana and his band.

The four talented soloists which make up The Gateway Singers are Elmerlee Thomas, a gifted Negro contralto, Jerry Walter, the five-string banjoist, Ernie Sheldon, one of the guitarists, and Travis Edmundson, the youngest member and the other guitarist.

Remember, that is Saturday, February 7, 1959 at 9 p.m. in the Student Lounge.

The singers are the third in CBC's annual lecture series presentations.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Sir:

During my two years at CBC, there have been a lot of things I liked and some that I disliked. The two I disliked the most are the inability of the students to act like college students and the criticism of the cheerleaders.

When I was sitting in the cafeteria, I noticed one of the tables had a persons name gouged in it. I wonder what sort of person this is. I might not think so much of this in High School, since most students haven't matured enough to know better, but here at CBC, I would hope that they had more respect for the things, we the students, are paying for. I hope the person or persons who did this get a big charge out of their art work.

Another big gripe of mine is the criticizing that we (the cheerleaders) get from some of the students. The cheerleaders meet three times a week and we try to pick out yells and chants that the students will like, but no matter how well or how badly we do, there is always a few that sit on their fat duffs and criticize. I'd gladly let any student at any game lead a cheer. I'd like to have a few do it, and let them find out what a lousy bunch of deadbeats we have here at CBC. We have a few who will yell all the time win or lose, but the ones who come and just sit there and make a big joke out of yells are the ones who aren't worth their weight in salt.

We have a new college here and we should be proud or a little thankful for it, but I know there are those who would not know what being proud or thankful is, so the few that are, will just have to suffer until these "kids" can grow up.

Thank you Mr. Bryson.

TV Critic Sees Good In Demise Of 'Dagnet'

By BOB DEARBROUCK

The time. . . January 18; the place. . . the Post Intelligencer, page 7; Jack Webb announces that due to a decline in popularity ratings he may drop the "Dagnet" series. My job?, to see why Dagnet is dragging; I carry a pencil. . . I'm a critic.

The above paragraph is in the form of a well known cliché, and a cliché and it's repeated use is a sure-fire yawn-provoker even when the repeating is done by its originator. And this is exactly what is wrong with the ailing Dagnet series — it has become, and has been for some time, a dull, overdone, overauthentic, king-sized cliché!

A woman accidentally picks up the wrong prescription in a drug store; the druggist noticing the mistake some time later calls the woman's house only to find that she has moved and has left no forwarding address. If the woman takes the pills she will die. This, of course, is a job for Sargeant Joe Friday and Officer Frank Smith. The subsequent routine method in which the woman is found and "saved" fits in the rest of a recent typically "exciting" Dagnet show. Surely "plots" such as this are more appropriate for the dead than for the living.

Five years and 276 "Dagnet" films ago police movies were a mental riot from the first shot to the apprehended criminals last dying groan. (They rarely brought them in alive in those days.) Dagnet, coming in on the scene about this time was a pleasant lull between wailing women and screaming sirens. The not-too-brilliant honest-cop-Smith, Friday's straight man; the unseen, domineering wife of Smith, and the stolid hero himself, Friday: they came as a refreshing novelty to cool the overly excited TV viewer. But now, after five years and 276 novelties, the novelty is no longer novel, its cold!

Due to their once overwhelming popular acceptance and consequently large financial backing, these documentary type shows like Dagnet and several of its imitators ran from good to excellent drama, camera work and background music, very good casting and acting, and tolerable settings. But, if truth is stranger than fiction none of these shows have taken advantage of it.

The cycle has been completed; from the rougher-thrills miles-of-mountain-roads thrill to the cream puff and back again. We're ready once again for the wailing women and screaming police sirens.

Puzzling Rumors Straightened For Transferees

Several false rumors concerning transferring to other colleges float around CBC. The registrar's office clarifies them here.

There are not enough sophomore courses to choose from and to fulfill requirements. This is false in the majority of cases, but in some fields course offerings are limited, and in a few fields, it is to the student's advantage to transfer after his freshman year. Pharmacy majors, for instance, to be employed in certain parts of the country must have four out of five of their college years at a pharmacy school; so it is needless to say that more than one year of credits at CBC would not count toward a pharmacy degree.

Also, engineering students who have transferred to other colleges find that some of the courses at CBC in such things as math cannot be transferred, not because these math courses aren't transferable, but because engineering majors should have taken them in high school, and therefore, they are only high school credit deficiencies made up in junior college.

History courses are not transferable. This is false. The registrar's office at CBC works closely with the admission office of all the institutes of higher learning in the State of Washington, and elsewhere. Mr. Askegaard finds that there is no problem in transferring history and other approved courses as long as the student's academic grades are satisfactory. Any student in doubt as to his transfer curriculum should feel free to see Mr. Askegaard at any time.

One hundred numbered courses cannot be taken by sophomores. This is false, also. One hundred courses at other colleges which are comparable to CBC the first two years can even be taken by graduate students, so they can certainly be taken for credit by sophomores at CBC.

D-grades are not transferable to other colleges. This is false but it should be understood that D-grades are only transferable provided they are not in the student's major or minor field and that his accumulated grade-point average is at least 2.0.

For further information students may check with George P. Askegaard, CBC registrar, in the office.

Service Club To Donate Microfilm Reader

The Service Objective Committee of the local Soroptimist Club recently made a survey of the Pasco-Kennewick area to find a worthwhile community need. Result of survey: Columbia Basin College has been offered a new $415 Recordak Microfilm Reader.

Mrs. Marie Percey, a member of the Soroptimist Club and a member of the faculty as chairman of secretarial science at CBC, was asked by the club to speak with college administrators about equipment needed for the school.

It was suggested by Mrs. Mildred Partch, Director of School Libraries for the Pasco School District, that a microfilm reader would be an aid to students and faculty, as well as to the public, in the viewing of 35 mm or 16 mm microfilms of newspapers, rare books, manuscripts, etc. After studying the situation, the membership of the local branch of the Soroptimist International Association, a classified service club of executive and professional women, decided in favor of presenting the Recordak to the college.

To the library, the Recordak will, among other advantages, allow for a conservation of storage space due to the fact that microfilmed recordings of such papers as the New York Times will be much easier to store than the papers themselves. Class assignments involving research work will also be facilitated.

Varro, McVicker To Be Delegates

The CBC Young Democrats will send President Robert Varro as a delegate to the Legislative Seminar at Olympia on February 15, 16 and 17. This seminar will be attended by two students from every political science department of the senior colleges of Washington. CBC is the only junior college affiliated with the Citizenship Clearing House, sponsor of this seminar.

During the seminar the students will have the opportunity to attend Legislative Committee hearings, visit sessions of the Senate and House, and will have audience with Governor Albert Rosellini and Lieutenant Governor John Cherberg.

The CBC Young Republicans have elected Dell McVicker to be their delegate to the above mentioned seminar. Better understanding, by college students, of the operation of our State Legislature is the expected goal of this conference. Alternate delegates are Mrs. Melba Westerfield and Mr. Paul Myhre. Mr. Walter Oberst, Political Science Director, will also accompany the students.

Young Republic Hear Chamberlain

The CBC Young Republicans were honored with the presence of guest speaker, Mr. Robert Chamberlain, Franklin County Republican Chairman, at their regular meeting Tuesday, January 27. Mr. Chamberlain explained the organization of the Republican party from the precinct committee level up to the State Chairman. He extended an invitation to CBC Young Republicans to send delegates to observe meetings of the Franklin County organization. He, also, urged them to take an active part in helping to build a strong Republican organization in the Tri-City area. Looking toward the 1964 election.
